Annotatsion: This article discusses the role of the exercise system in native language textbooks. Exercises are the main support for the development of the student's creative thinking, strengthening the newly learned topic.

When updating the content of native language textbooks, improving the system of exercises and didactic analysis is the main tool for forming linguistic and communicative competencies in students. Exercises and tasks in textbooks should be directed towards critical thinking, creative approach and correct use of language in real life, rather than mechanical memorization.

1. Basic Principles of the Exercise System

When creating and didactically reworking new generation textbooks, it is necessary to rely on the following criteria:

• Systematicity and consistency: Exercises should be arranged sequentially from simple to complex, reinforcing previous topics and creating a foundation for new knowledge.

• Integration: Combining grammatical rules with text analysis, spelling rules and speech development exercises.

• Differential approach: Including tasks of different levels (reproductive, partially searchable, creative), taking into account the individual capabilities of students.

2. Didactic Analysis of Exercises and Tasks

Each exercise has its own didactic function, and when analyzing their effectiveness, they are divided into the following types:

• Linguistic (Linguistic) analysis: Phonetic, lexical, morphemic, word formation and syntactic analysis. These represent the essence of language units.

• Logical and Semantic Analysis: Understanding the content of a given text, identifying the semantic and pragmatic features of words.

• Analysis that develops speech activity: Checking the suitability of creative tasks that connect reading, listening, writing and speaking skills

For the correct application of language phenomena in practice, it is very important that the exercises and tasks in the textbook are methodologically consistent. Linguistic expertise of the textbook content and updating its didactic support will increase students' vocabulary and grammatical literacy. If you want to study the topic in more depth, which of the following would you like me to provide more information on?

• Classification of exercises according to the age characteristics of students

• Didactics of creative tasks in textbooks

• Methods for preventing speech errors when performing exercises

Conclusion: Today's textbooks are modern and require students to be very knowledgeable. It is in native language textbooks that exercises are the main tool for learning this subject, and they have an important feature.
